STATEMENT:

I am an improvisational textile artist. The rhythm and repetition of piecing fabric, cutting into those pieces to create new configurations and rejoining them--without ruler or measurement--create vigorous, abstract structures. Bold color and value choices further propel the musicality of my compositions. My works are densely quilted resulting in dynamic fabric paintings.

STATEMENT:

The Schuylkill Expressway is the eastern most segment of Pennsylvania Interstate 76 connecting all points west to Philadelphia. Commuters and visitors to the City of Brotherly Love affectionately refer to this horrendous motorway as the “Sure-kill” Expressway. It is one of the most dangerous, over-traveled roads in Pennsylvania, and one of the most inadequate. If you are not involved in an accident, you most likely will find yourself in gridlock traffic caused by one! To make matters worse, improvements are nearly impossible due to its location next to the Schuylkill River. This talisman includes bits of broken glass, hand polished reflectors, tiny car tires, mapped accident points and offers much luck to the motorist braving this infamous and treacherous roadway.

STATEMENT:

During the 1970s I painted large paintings of grid structures of subtle color variations. My art has evolved to depicting representational images. I have continued to maintain a maximalist obsession with patterning, surface detail and color variation. Currently my painting, drawing and photography is a response to what I see. There are biographical references, the inclusion of family members as painting subjects. These images are from the tradition to render what the artist Faith Ringgold called, "painting the world as it really is."

STATEMENT:

Since the removal of most of my right arm muscle to cancer, I have had to change the focus of my artwork from the metalsmithing in which I was trained. I tried many different media, and in a move that surprised even me, ended up making art from dryer lint. I had washed some material a few years ago and noticed the color and texture. I started arranging the patterns and was pleased with the result. I now very carefully sort my laundry, and admittedly will sometimes buy colorful throws and towels in order to get the lint I want. None of the lint is dyed (how can you dye what is essentially dust?) and I have shelves full of sorted lint to choose from when creating a new piece. I tend to choose animals as my subjects because it makes the work feel more alive to me; I am really not interested in doing landscapes or still lifes because they don't laugh at the material. After so many years of sadness with my cancer treatments, I like to laugh; it pleases me when people say "dryer lint?" It's definitely funny to consider what the art is made of, and my work has always had that thread of humor throughout it. The laughter I feel in making the art is felt in the viewer, I believe, and sometimes that is enough. And, surprisingly, this has made me the world's leading dryer lint artist. Consumer Reports calls me "The Andy Warhol of Dryer Lint," and my work can be seen in Ripley's Believe it or Not books and museums around the world. I've won two Niche Awards for my work, have been featured in various magazines and podcasts (including 60 Second Docs), and recently appeared on ABC TV's "To Tell The Truth" where celebrities like Mel Brooks had to guess who the real dryer lint artist was.

She currently heads up the Fine Art Metals department at Millersville University in Pennsylvania. Becky served on the Society of North American Goldsmiths (SNAG) Board of Directors for seven years. She has participated in numerous national, and international exhibitions and has lectured and presented workshops across the country. McDonah's work has been published in CAST, Metalsmith magazine, Humor in Craft, Mixed Metal Jewelry Workshop, and 500 Metal Vessels.

STATEMENT:

Metalsmith Becky McDonah focuses on the format of the reliquary for its ability to elaborately protect and display venerated objects. She explores issues dealing with importance of position, presentation, and access or limited access to the contents. By using extensive ornamentation and precious materials, McDonah initiates contemplation that elevates the ordinary thus glorifying symbolic contents. This consideration of the supposedly "little things" can open one's mind to the larger picture of cultural practices and ideals.

Handwoven coverlet wall hanging

SALE PRICE: $550

RESUME:

I have been designing and weaving coverlets based on my research of 19th Pennsylvania German coverlets for over 30 years. I have participated in the Art of the State in 2015, 2018, 2019. My coverlet /wall hangings have also been shown at regional and local shows. I share my research and work through articles in national weaving publications as well as presentations at national and regional seminars. While I am particularly fascinated with the multi-shaft weave structures and patterns found in Pennsylvania German coverlets and manuscripts, I am equally enthralled with 21st century weaving software and computer assisted looms.

STATEMENT:

For the Love of Tulips - 48" x 57" - The tulip motif is a classic Pennsylvania German symbol of perfect, enduring love. I designed my coverlet wall hanging with the tulip as the central motif. Surrounding it are rose and snowball figures. The trees in the border are a variation of the tulip. The cotton fringe is woven separately and attached with fine overcast stitches. Both the border and fringe surround the main pattern on three sides. The coverlet is woven with cotton and wool. Gay McGeary is a scholar-weaver based in Central Pennsylvania. Her special interest is in the work of 19th century Pennsylvania German Weavers, who produced a magnificent array of bed coverings, known as "coverlets," combining art with function. She delights in mastering complex techniques, using color, texture and pattern to create designs that are both traditional and innovative.

STATEMENT:

I throw my forms on a wheel and fire them without glaze using a bare clay technique called horsehair raku. The highly burnished forms take a month or longer to create. After the forms are burnished, they are bisque and gold fired. The final phase is the primal creative experience for me. It is a very fast and fluid process. The kiln is raised to 1800 degrees Fahrenheit. I watch for heat radiant cues on the ware to pick the exact moment to stop the firing and immediately reduced with Horsehair. I am drawn to the intimate and painterly approach of horsehair reduction. The carbon from the hair embeds into the burnished layers of the clay resulting in translucent planes of line and smoke in the surface.

Susan, now retired, had a 40-year career as an art educator, including 38 years as a professor of art at Waynesburg University, where she taught ceramics, clay sculpture, and art history. She also served as chair of the Department of Fine Arts and was director of the Benedum Fine Arts Gallery. At Waynesburg University, Susan was selected to receive the Lucas-Hathaway Award for Teaching Excellence and has been honored with Professor Emerita status. Susan is a long-term member of the National Association for Education in the Ceramic Arts (NCECA). When NCECA held its annual conference in Pittsburgh in 2008, Susan was co-curator of an exhibition, held at the John Heinz History Center, of Monongahela River 19th century salt-glazed stoneware from the Waynesburg University collection. Susan maintains a home studio in Amity, PA and exhibits her work regionally. In November of 2017, she had a solo exhibition of her work at the Wheeling Artisan Center in Wheeling, WV. She is a member of the Craftsmen's Guild of Pittsburgh.

STATEMENT:

My current work is informed by the Japanese aesthetic wabi sabi, which is complex but can be partially defined as rustic, unrefined beauty. I am attracted to this way of working because it seems to celebrate the nature of raw clay and emphasize the tactile qualities of the material used which in this case is a red stoneware clay with heavy grog. My approach is to utilize stiffened slab shapes that are joined with liberal amounts of slip, which is allowed to ooze out and form an irregular linear element. I also use the natural (live) edges of the slabs wherever possible. The finishing process I use is a mishima treatment, in which red iron oxide is brushed over all and then sponged off, creating a contrast of light and dark areas and emphasizing textures. On some pieces, I add brushwork to the mishima base, and on some I apply a black glaze to areas of the piece. Firing is done in an electric kiln to cone 5. Some of my works are wall-hung, and some are vessel forms that are more sculptural than functional.

RESUME:

I've exhibited my wood turnings since 1987 in scores of museum, gallery and corporate exhibitions throughout the country. They are in corporate, museum and private collections here and abroad. The turnings have received dozens of awards, including, for myself, Lifetime Achievement Award from the Central Bucks (Co.) Chamber of Commerce; Pennsylvania Governor's Tourism Conference Award; Best of Show, Bower Art Center, Bedford, VA; First Place Art of the State: Pennsylvania '18, '12 '93. The first year I showed my work, it received First Place at the 26th Contemporary Craft Exhibition, Delaware Art Museum; second place at ArtQuest, of which it was chosen from 5,000 entrants, with exhibitions in New York, Philadelphia and Los Angeles,. It was also chosen for the "International Turned Objects Show," in Philadelphia, featuring 116 woodturners from around the world. My work has been judged by jurors from the Guggenheim Museum, National Museum of Art, Museum of Contemporary Art in Los Angeles, the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, the Art Institute in Chicago, and the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, among others. It has been favorably reviewed by art critics, including on three separate occasions, the New York Times. It's been featured on television, and has appeared in numerous books and magazines.

STATEMENT:

My current work is informed by the Japanese aesthetic wabi sabi, which is complex but can be partially My inspiration comes from Native American and Egyptian art as well as individual applications, such as the carved tear drop design on 198, the carved diamonds on 194 and the optical illusion of the design on the neck of 184. The carving to create a raised effect is done after the turning has been finished. There is no room for error. Each turning I create exhibits a unique perspective. On 198, the neck, upper section, middle of the zig zag design on the center ring and the lower half of the turning are made from zebra wood. Cut and applied differently, the wood creates a different appearance. All the colors of the woods in all of my turnings are natural; no stains or dyes are used. The interior of each vessel is finished to the same smooth patina as the exterior. To make each one-of-a-kind vessel, I apply skills in design, mathematics, woodworking, joinery and finishing. I draw upon years of research and spend hours designing and sketching each turning. I attempt new ideas in every piece. When successful, I take those concepts and adapt them to other pieces. Once a concept has been proven, I move outside my comfort zone to try new theories and techniques.

STATEMENT:

Art is acid etched on aluminum shapes that we create and hand finish with saws, files and buffing. The art is applied to the aluminum using an acid resistant paint. The painted aluminum is submerged into acid. The acid eats the exposed, unpainted metal, leaving the artwork in raised relief. The paint is removed and the artwork is hand buffed to a lustrous shine.

STATEMENT:

I work in clay because it enables me to be expressive in ways I cannot in other mediums. I work on several different levels. On one level, I use the process of wood firing to create a chance element in my finished work. The nuances of the flame, the drips of ash, happy mistakes - all this excites me. On another level, I like people to use my work. As a potter, this is important to me. For one to pick up a pot and feel it, to use it, to enjoy both the visual beauty and the functional aspect - only then is my work complete. I begin by concentrating on producing simple, yet classic forms on the wheel. By varying the types of wood, length of the firing, a rapid or slow temperature climb and deliberately positioning the pots for effect - all of this contributes to their individuality.

STATEMENT:

My Abstractions are a continual adventure in the search for beauty which lies beyond form and nature. Beauty in its original form. The balance in my paintings lies between the positive and the negative, the dynamic and the static and the busy and the calm. Both the talker and the listener are equally important and needed for progress. Each of my paintings has a story and a history of its own. I treat them as beings that have there own feelings and needs. Painting for me is a continuous adventure and discovery. The detachment of forms and the contemplation of colors, allows me not to force myself or my ideas on the canvas. Rather its a Two way communication between me and the canvas. My destination is something beyond form or shape. It is the abstracted beauty which lies between the source and its reflection on the mirror of reality.

STATEMENT:

Artist Maryanne Buschini creates figurative paintings based on research and investigation of the relationship of people and water. This focus on the peoples and land inhabited sequentially by indigenous population prior to 1680, European settlers and the village of Kensico, and ultimately the dispersal and immigration of workers to build Kensico Reservoir within the NYC water system, as well as present day use. This water system was created to solve the problem of the lack of clean water in an expanding population of NYC. Using research and available imagery, she recreates images of these people and surroundings through painting. These paintings examine and imagine how the figures relate to each other and their environment, the time and space they are taking, the identity of people who lived in this space, as well as relationships of humans and nature. Art work examines location and dislocation, as each of these groups have been forced to move elsewhere, or arrive from somewhere else, and the use of technology and engineering to solve problems of society. In researching this history, and creating new images, paintings also illuminate how these events reflect in our contemporary times.

STATEMENT:

I try to make pictures that capture a scene or a moment in time that made me stop and look twice. Much of my work depicts simple every day objects or places that go unnoticed as life rushes by. In presenting these subjects I simply want you to do what I did...stop and look. Enjoy the simple beauty that surrounds you in the form of light, color, texture and atmosphere.

STATEMENT:

This was my attempt to remove all parts of it from the canvas and start all over again. Rubbing and scraping areas and watching what I had viewed as a mistake, struggle to exist. Every morning, I would look at it; sitting on an easel in my room. It sat there for days, actually weeks and I began to develop it. Applying paint to areas that had been removed and more to other areas...I would look at the face of this child; a face I had almost destroyed and I would study it. I felt as if it was calling to me; to help it come to fruition. The look of confusion yet strength emanates from its beauty. "Emergence" displays the truth in the eyes of a Black Child. It's a reminder that the world doesn't see our babies in all of their brilliance.

STATEMENT:

I am an observer by nature. During my career as an aesthetician I learned to look beyond the surface of people to gain a deeper understanding of people. This experience has influenced the content of my work as an artist. When I paint, I portray people, places, and things to which I have an emotional connection using thick layers of paint that symbolize both the complexity of my subjects and the urge to embellish and sometimes hide our surfaces. My technique of multiple layering of paint, markers, glitter, and even makeup is strongly influenced by my years of covering scars and insecurities with topical makeup and things that made people feel pretty. I learned long ago that pain and traumatic injury are often hidden below layers of cosmetics. I want people to see the beauty that I see; that the world is perfectly imperfect. It is complex by design and always has complex layers below its beautiful outer layers. When scratching the surface, laying down layers and layers of glitter, gold, and paint I invite viewers to embrace things for their strangeness and visually dig below the layers to find the complex meanings buried under and between the layers. There are objects and forms to be found in the layers of paint that sometimes represent chapters in a story, though often not an overtly narrative one. I paint both plein air and directly from my own photographs in my studio. The colors chosen reflect my mood, often a brilliant palette with strong, positive vibration. I use dynamic line and shape to create movement, giving vitality and significance to places and people that are frequently not represented or misrepresented. This work portrays the beauty of my community.

STATEMENT:

As a watercolor painter, most of my work has centered on my post-precisionist paintings of urban spaces, and other structural forms. With these works, I break down the perceived subjects into spaces, volumes, lines and colors that resonate the energy they hold for me and the energy that I pour into the painted surface. My approach with these works is not in a mode of abstraction, but a depiction of physical spaces and forms that are very familiar to me and that surround me, without the restrictions of imitation, but rather planes of color and form that interlock and interact to form a new vision of those spaces. In Gold & Violet Pipe Dream, the inspiration is the DuPont pipe organ at Longwood Gardens, PA, viewed through the plexiglass panels that reflect back the faces and posters describing this 1930's Aeolian organ. The work creates a dream-like fugue of golds and violets and blues that one can almost hear, if one could hear in color.

RESUME:

After retiring from 35 years of teaching, I now devote my time to creating detailed figurative oil / acrylic paintings inspired by many contemporary issues. My paintings are in many private collections and I show extensively throughout the United States and abroad. I am an elected member of Audubon Artists of New York, American Artists Professional League, Allied Artists of America, and The Bethlehem Fine Arts Commission. I had a solo exhibition at Hunterdon Art Museum, and have participated in many juried group shows at the Maryland Federation of Art, the Kemerer Museum of Art, Exhibizone International in Toronto, Canada, Art Against Racism Show in Newark, NJ, the State Museum of Pennsylvania in Harrisburg, and The Salmagundi Club in NYC. In 2017, I participated in the Boz'art en Baz'art Invitational Exhibition in Vichy, France, representing the USA with my artwork. Selected awards include Best Traditional Oil from the Audubon Artists of America and Painting Award in Oils from Allied Artists in 2020. Other accolades include awards at The Maryland Federation of Art, Googleworks in Reading, PA, and the Allentown Art Museum. His artwork has appeared in various publications such as Arts Magazine, Lehigh Valley Style Magazine, and Arts Alive! Books that feature his paintings are Artists in Residence and How to Discover Your Personal Painting Style.

STATEMENT:

Telling a story or stating a message about our world is a pivotal part of my artist expression. I am essentially a visual storyteller and have been using my aesthetic voice by utilizing a series format approach with my artwork for many years. My unique and imaginative point of view on a variety of contemporary sociopolitical themes is evident in my oil / acrylic paintings. Work submitted for this exhibit come from my three of my series: Stream of Consciousness Shadow Series, and Objet de Art. My multiple realistic figurative imagery becomes a social and visual commentary for the viewer. My process is complex. I tend to mask out areas of the canvas and apply random colors within the exposed spaces. Once I have the desired effect, I begin layering paint in thin strata and complete that application with a varnish to help pop the color. Afterwards, I spend hours by detailing the realistic images one brushstroke at a time. Each work has its own theme, color palette, and message. Shelf Life is a reflective autobiographical piece personalizing everyday objects that symbolize my life and that of a deceased friend.

STATEMENT:

Photographic truth is very malleable, I find that both the image maker and viewer are in possession of a medium that can significantly alter the way we view the world and process the information it contains.

All of this leads me to my interest in the capture of the non fiction image, distilled from visual encounters with humanity and place. The camera is my tool, selected to understand life and communicating the result to others. In my approach to work about the human condition I shy away from the aspect of photographic coverage and tend to be involved in photographic dis coverage. It seems to me the paradox of life as well in photography is to go out and seek things which you never expected. I like to think of my work as imagery that prevents truth decay and represents honest non manipulated photographs.

STATEMENT:

It all starts with puddles of color and the spaces between the wires in a cage. I often ask myself why am I painting people and where am I going with this style that has evolved. I believe I have been painting the subtle influences and situations throughout my life and now I come to theoretical questions of life. We all ask ourselves personal questions. I paint mine. As I explore the expressions on the faces of people, I began to see familiarity in the expressions when thinking about the history of my life experiences. In order to explore these histories that I have lived through, I challenged myself to work on a larger scale. As I reflect, the drama in my figures' demeanor becomes important in the moment and a storyline with familiar expressions from my past evolve. I begin to imagine ribbons of hair coiled in frustration or flowers floating around my subjects mimicking the randomness of the tendrils. Exploring why the tendrils appear are important for two new series of paintings. While secluded during covid, I think about my friends and how we tell each other secrets which begin to weave their own intimate story. The tendrils become ribbons that intertwine the truths we share.

STATEMENT:

A few decades spent creating editorial illustrations left me burnt out and yearning to make art that once again excited me. As terrifying as the pandemic is, I'm grateful it gave me time to revisit the type of art that always inspired me - abstract painting. Truth be told - I'm a Type "A", bona fide control freak, and my illustrations alluded to that point. I was structured and precise, deadline-driven, and accustomed to having concepts and design already laid out for me. Becoming an abstract painter forced me into an unfamiliar and uncomfortable space of unpredictability and playfulness. While many aspects of painting are under my control, what emerges once the oil and cold wax is laid down is often surprising. The freedom I've given myself to explore and create art that's solely mine is both exhilarating and challenging. By building grungy, textural layers and then working back into them with tools and solvents, I'm allowed to learn and make mistakes and to grow as an artist for the first time in a long while. You'll still find remnants of my illustrative past with the incorporation of sharp lines and collage, but it's the push and pull of creating an oil and cold wax piece that motivates me to witness what emerges by the time the final layer of wax is applied. Long Way Home was created soon after dropping my youngest off at college for the first time. Although only 5 hours away on the other side of the state, she seemed so far away that first night.

STATEMENT:

As a visual artist, I aim to see the "color" in the "black and white" conversations offered in society today. These dichotomies are almost always opposite, "Black and White", if you will, and I encourage entertaining different perspectives and allowing room for ..color!

..To relook at a thing and discover new 'color' in what seems obvious is a form of visual introspection, and allows a glimpse into that childlike wonder we all long for in learning new things.

STATEMENT:

Randall is ambitious when it comes to his approach to painting. His work comes in a variety of channels including studio work, en plein air landscapes, portraits and his "en rain air" style. The "en rain air" style comes about from painting a scene from his mini van or window while it is raining. The rain drops on the window act as a means for abstraction. The juxtaposition of abstract and reality creates emotional paintings.

Teaching: 3 colleges, 52 years: Wooster College, Centenary College, NJ, and Morris Community College, NJ. Paintings in many private collections and several museums. Over 100 solo exhibits and 200 group exhibits.

STATEMENT:

Our landscapes that surround us are beautiful, inspiring, and therapeutic, and should not be polluted with signs, poles, rubbish, and garbage. That sounds like an impossible dream, but I believe that with persistent reminders people will respond positively. My paintings try to show the abuse by careless and uncaring people who are oblivious to spoiling the landscape. Of course, as an artist, I try to make paintings beautiful, but at the same time I believe that paintings should carry a message which may not always be pleasant. So, hopefully my environmental paintings will serve the purpose of encouraging people to appreciate our precious landscape and help preserve it forever.

RESUME:

I have painted as long as I can remember. Although I worked in the engineering field for over thirty years, I always spent as much of my spare time working on my art skills. After retiring twenty years ago I started teaching painting and drawing at a number of institutions and organizations. Since my retirement I have completed numerous portraits for individuals and organizations. I have also continued to participate in numerous local, regional, and national art shows. My paintings are in a number of collections both here and abroad. I am a member of NOAPS and currently represented in one of their national group shows which is being held at the Principle Gallery in Charleston, S. Carolina.

STATEMENT:

Because of the restrictions of the past year due to the Pandemic, I have concentrated mainly on still life paintings. They have consisted of objects in my studio, and objects that can be found around the house, such as cleaning supplies food and a variety of beverages. Only a few of the paintings have been works done outside, mainly around the house. The advantage to working on my painting the past year has been the uninterrupted studio time which has allowed me to concentrate exclusively on my painting process. I have worked to create realistic paintings that do not just copy an object, but takes the objects in the painting to the next level of realism. I want to create a painting that creates excitement and makes the viewer want to return to the painting over and over again.

STATEMENT:

Expressing and describing the beauty of light has been the focus of Brian Keeler's career in painting, which includes landscape, the figure, portraits, still life and allegorical work. Depicting the "topography of light" is the way he likes to describe this process, as this phrase communicates the way light plays across forms in the multifaceted expressions of both the light and the subjects. In a certain sense however, the light actually becomes the subject for Keeler and the scene or depiction takes on a secondary or supporting roll. He often chooses the "Golden Hour" as the time for portraying the motifs he selects, as this late afternoon or early morning light accentuates the drama of any given scene. His figurative painting and other genres also incorporate a marvelous appreciation for the way light can reveal the world to us. Among other artists, patrons and the general public he is known as a colorist, which is to say, it is the quality of his color that is one of the memorable aspects of his well-crafted work. His art also combines a unique sense of composition, proportional harmonies and draftsmanship, as these paintings, pastels and watercolors show an orchestration of the overall relationships. Keeler combines these aesthetics of light and structural compositional dynamics in his work, and in his teaching and writing as he shares his love for painting in workshops in the US and abroad, most notably in figure and plein air courses taught in Italy. He has become a passionate student of the Italian Renaissance over his more than 20 years of teaching and traveling in Italy and he shares these art history insights in slide lectures as well as incorporating some aspects of the classics in his own allegorical works.

STATEMENT:

I am influenced by the environment surrounding me. When creating art, I believe we influence others by modifying the environment which in turn influences us, completing the cycle. When conceptualizing a work, I spend time watching and listening what is going on in the world. My approach to art is both reflective of the people involved in its creation and the uninitiated viewer. Using portraiture, I create another world and building a myth. The resulting Art becomes a parable telling the truth. As a classically trained artist, I readily integrate contemporary materials and processes to make sure the work is relevant and timely. Community and grant funded public art projects are one way of interacting with viewers, studio-based work is another. I am very sensitive to the space, time, and people I work with and it shows in the finished artwork.

STATEMENT:

In 2018, I started making an American flag series, "My American Flag," responding to the assumption by White Supremacists that only white people are "patriotic" in this country. The country I came to become a citizen is now my country: I love America. I used many "feminine" materials like shimmering rhinestones, polished artificial nails, pearls on wood panel, rendering the exact image of an American flag initially using the same colors and then variations of colors and textures but keeping the star shapes. My own "stars and stripes" have become twelve different flags. Twelve flags for twelve months and representing wholeness of the universe. The series took me three years to finish.

STATEMENT:

As most inhabitants of our world will agree, this has been a surreal and devastating year. I must admit though, there were times I felt at peace, with gratitude to my artistic nature, because it provided an opportunity to escape each day to a world of my choosing. Three of the four works being submitted were painted during the pandemic. It Became a Fantasy was the first of the trio, created in response to an invitation to participate in a special show at the Bellefonte Art Museum. The scene was based on an area along the Bonnechere River in Ontario, however, as I progressed, it became otherworldly. The Light of Nature, again from the Bonnechere River area, became my choice for social distancing, at a time when that phrase was repeated again, and again, and again. River Alert was the result of the realization that I was not going to see Canadian waters that year, something my husband and I had been doing each summer for 30 years. Barnitz Mill, painted 3 years ago along a delta in Mississippi, is the result of a freezing visit South where I was stuck in a cabin for weeks on end. All represent an outside influence not in my control, but an influence that was not always negative; it did provide an escape into the paint.

STATEMENT:

My work is about looking - at the world through images of the world whether via reflections, photographs or the fog of memory. I articulate these visions through painting in oil. My subjects arrive through my daily travels, when the aesthetic possibilities of ordinary places are suddenly made apparent, either due to some change in light or my state of mind. I'm more susceptible to these visions when my defenses are down. I capture these fleeting moments through photographs and develop them through painting. By allowing their essence to emerge over an extended time, mundane views of security cameras, parking lots, car windows and reflective storefronts are transformed into something majestic and strange. Photography is an important element in my work. Practically, photographs allow me to capture a fleeting instant, but often are integral to the work, especially my car paintings. I'm interested in the importance of this object to a person's identity and the impulse to capture it in a photograph and cherish that long after the vehicle is gone. They become indirect portraits of people, and portals to the past allowing me to bring the past into the present and find connections between my experiences and the experiences of others. My oil painting process is a painstaking one of building up small marks and is purposefully perverse - an act of quiet rebellion to the dominant forms of communication in our culture. I seek to turn our mediated view of the world inside out, by taking a digitally generated view and transforming it into a something unique - a painting, with subtle qualities of color, light, temperature and texture, and asking the question "What is real?"

STATEMENT:

As an independent and self-taught artist, I enjoy creating work that represents movement and light, especially the distortion of light and reflection. My unique style of painting is a result of being primarily self-taught in the fine arts. Through trial and error, I've learned that my best paintings convey memories or represent a moment in time; in oil, my work tends to be more classical in style, yet when I work in acrylic, I paint more assertively and employ outlines and high-contrast elements to 'pop' key elements off the canvas. My personal projects, done for my own fulfillment and professional development, are usually large-scale acrylics that focus on the brilliance and power of color. I am drawn to close-cropped themes with a modern, obvious edge. As a former graphic designer, I often find myself incorporating graphic design 'rules' and styles into my paintings -- clean lines, use of strong contrasting elements and classic, bright colors that attract the eye. Most of my portfolio evokes this illustrative style, and I enjoy depicting everyday scenes or objects in this exaggerated and hyper-saturated style.

STATEMENT:

Upon waking, I first assess which of my joints has become newly displaced. I adjust my position and determine whether and how I should stand. I move forward knowing that everything could change in a moment, and likely it will. For me, the present is equal parts hypothetical and actual, preliminary and reactive. I am interested in the moment where certainty and circuitry meet. While my work is rooted in historical questions of representation, I deliberately resist clarity and shift images into a liminal state of disarrangement. The idiosyncrasies that occur during the process of creation dominate the final image and a single mark has the parallel potential to render or unravel legibility. My paintings inhabit worlds where the mystical co-exists with the explainable. As time passes, my images wander further from direct narration towards precarious states of resolution. While I begin with a clear intention, I deliberately misorder my own plans, and welcome unexplained subluxations and disruptions. The paintings convey so many contradictory points of focus that realities become intertwined and individual signification is lost. The final images are a chance-medley of visceral sensations and unsettled realities.

STATEMENT:

My figurative oil paintings and works on paper explore identity, femininity, representation, sexuality, and empowerment. For this collection of work, I expanded on these themes by focusing in on the powerful and diverse women found in American politics today. This series was inspired by the feminist debate on how women's appearances are constantly judged, criticized and dissected; often done so with the intent of diminishing their work and contributions. This issue is prevalent in all industries, but especially in the very public and important realm of politics. Throughout mainstream media, I found countless examples of coverage depicting what a female politician was wearing and why it was deemed "inappropriate," rather than discussing their policies. This painting is not a classic portrait, but zoomed in studies of the subject's legs, shoes and body mostly from the neck down. By doing so, the work focuses on the experiences and outside societal forces that women, and women like them, have faced. To create these works, I used sourced photographs of female politicians that felt meaningful and powerful to me. Before painting, I manipulated each image through cropping, elongating or changing its composition, background and color. Color is especially important, as it is an expression that is frequently rejected or criticized in politics by men. I used vibrant jewel tones and color swaps to represent the bold new ideas and diversity these women are bringing to United States politics. I was considering the way color can be this foreign idea, it's the feminine, the other, it's vulgar, non western, alien, dangerous, how male dominated spaces are being infiltrated with color and how that can stoke fear and feel like a loss of power. I aimed to both celebrate these women with this work and to explore the infantilization, microaggressions, and discrimination they, and women everywhere, are forced to face day to day.

STATEMENT:

My personal objective as an artist is to breathe life into forgotten, abandoned or mundane objects, and have them take center stage. Many of my paintings are part of a series which I call "Organized Chaos." Multiple objects are intentionally placed, to keep the viewer's eye moving. While keeping the viewer engaged, they will find interesting tidbits, which is demonstrated in "On the Hudson" where a peephole displays the NYC skyline. As I touch, blend, and move the pastels around, I am also connecting emotionally to my work. With simple compositional goals in mind, I play with the drama of light and shadows to create the vision I want to share. Ultimately, my hyper-realistic approach tries to trick the viewer into thinking they are looking at a photograph.

EXHIBITIONS:

In my artwork I use a variety of mediums and approaches, using oil, pastel, watercolor, graphite and etc. I work from life and also from reference. Still, there's an obvious likeness in all my work. Life is almost overwhelmingly complex. My instinctual response is to pare the visual world down to its sweet simple essentials: the glitter of sunlight touching a downcast eyelid, the angle that a stray fork lies on a white tablecloth, a folded leaf. The poet Basho wrote, "Every form of insentient existence - plants, stones, or utensils - has individual feelings similar to those of men. When we observe calmly, we discover that all things have their fulfillment." Teacups and doughnuts in my paintings may seem imbued with human emotions and motivations. Conversely, a human face I am painting may show kinship with mountains or clouds. As an artist my need is to express my emotional response to the profound beautiful and terrifying mystery of the visual world. I try to share this in a way which creates a quiet visual dialogue between us all: subject, artist and viewer.

EXHIBITIONS:

My paintings are inspired by my interest in people and depth psychology. Jungian psychology is a particular area of study including ideas about myth, symbolism and archetypes as they relate to the ongoing human story - also discussed in the work of Joseph Campbell. I try to capture the mystery, depth, and introspection I experience in everyday occurrences based on a combination of memories, dreams and reflections. Add to this my love and appreciation of plein air painting, color and beautiful figurative work.

STATEMENT:

I paint on canvas with oils using palette knives, often incorporating paper, fabric, oil sticks and pencil. I often begin with an underpainting of various colors and shapes. Then I add figures and surroundings with varying degrees of realism, allowing the underpainting to suggest the result.

Urban scenes and people in everyday life are the predominant subjects of my work. The figures can be solitary or interacting with each other, their surroundings, or the viewer, sometimes with a bit of humor. I identify with the characters in my paintings, and the emotions I imagine that they experience. I hope the viewer will do likewise.

STATEMENT:

In the past year I started a series of knot paintings on paper to address the collective anxiety and tension felt worldwide. I wanted to explore these negative emotions and find beauty in them as a form of healing. They began as a metaphor for the fear and distress that were so prevalent: stomach knots, muscle tension, blocked energy. But knots also connect and hold things together. Egalitarian and nonhierarchical, they represent an approach to problem solving that is inherently communal and a message about the power of combined forces.

RESUME:

Julie Riker is a native of central Pennsylvania and a graduate of the University of the Arts. She has worked as a decorator in the historic restoration of the PA State Capitol, where she was involved for five years replicating original decorative painting, stenciling and applying gold leaf and ornamental plaster finishes. In 1996 Julie started her own decorative painting business creating artwork for individual homes and businesses. Working out of her Camp Hill studio she specializes in custom art, decorative painting, murals and faux finishes for walls and furniture. She has travelled from New York to Florida for commissioned projects, and has even created and painted wall finishes for the PA Governor's residence in 2002. When not working for a client, Julie enjoys painting outdoors. Often these plein air paintings serve as inspiration for larger studio pieces, but some stand on their own as observations of the beauty and variety of nature. She has participated in many national plein air events and won several awards. Recent accomplishments are First Place at Paint Annapolis, Artist's Choice Award at Paint Snow Hill, People's Choice Award for Quick Draw at Finger Lakes Plein Air, Plein Air Magazine Award at the Wayne Plein Air Festival, Plein Air Salon Finalist, and Feature Artist juried into Plein Air Easton. Her work is featured in the Feb/March 2018 issue of Plein Air Magazine and she was recognized as an "Artist to Watch" in Southwest Art Magazine's October 2018 issue. Julie is a member of the Mid Atlantic Plein Air Painters and the Susquehanna Valley Plein Air Painters. She currently maintains a working studio above the Cornerstone Coffeehouse in Camp Hill and her paintings can be seen on her website www.julieriker.com

STATEMENT:

I consider myself primarily an observational painter, painting mostly from life, and often outside 'en plein air'. Painting in one session, "Alla prima" keeps the surface fresh. I like to look for interesting compositions and often don't know what I will choose to paint until I get to a location. I am fascinated by the effects of light and shadow. Sometimes what attracts me is simply a light effect and, though my work is representational, it is often the abstract patterns of shadows that get me started. I paint a vast range of subjects, and am always looking for a new challenge.

STATEMENT:

The majority of my work is inspired by figures and portraiture in poses and lighting that evoke a sense of drama and emotion. I find the figure to be my main source of inspiration because the figure holds an emotional power that not many things possess. I hope to invoke emotions and personal connections through the viewing of my work. My practice is also heavily informed by the media and classical and contemporary techniques and processes.

STATEMENT:

My recent work is inspired by the strange peripheries of the conspiratorial internet. It comes from the spooky feeling I get when I navigate the web's most troubling corners, especially the places where far right politics merge with solipsistic New Age thinking. I suspect that an aesthetic runs through this imagery - multicolored fonts, cheap depictions of "divine" light, broad appeals to morality, etc. - and I'm trying to isolate and examine it. Using an assortment of mundane and visionary sources, including cruise ships, utopian community models, web emojis, apocalyptic frontiers, internet memes, and shopping malls, I'm interested in what happens when the spaces we physically inhabit reckon with the spaces we imagine inhabiting. In a time of great social instability, I try to identify the reactionary visual vocabulary that people turn to as they reject a more humane understanding of our uncertain world.

STATEMENT:

My wife and I made our first trip to Paris December of '03. The Eiffel Tower was more awe-inspiring than I realized it would be. The upper platform of the tower was barely visible through the low-ceiling - it seemed to be reminding us of how tall it really was - the low ceiling that day emphasized its height. It was both beautiful and humbling. Cruising past the tower, we stumbled upon an antique carousel, its warm lights a seeming oasis in the cold. The contrasts of the image - the carousel against the Eiffel Tower struck me. Warmth and cold, light and dark, familiar and unfamiliar. There were people all around us - on the street, near the carousel - yet we felt like we were the only people in the world taking it all in. I knew I needed to capture those contrasts on canvas. It's those simple, fleeting moments when your thoughts and time seem to slow down, struggling to capture what you're witnessing, and you realize you're part of something bigger than yourself that inspire me to paint - the warmth of a carousel against a cold sky, neon lights flickering to life at dusk, colored Christmas lights reflecting off of ornaments, an inviting pile of toy cars, the late afternoon sun dancing on a jar of peaches, the warm lighting of a hotdog truck on a cool damp day, foods that bring back memories of childhood, the glow of an outdoor market's Fall bounty, a loving look from one of my children. It's those subtle, fleeting moments that drive me to paint.

STATEMENT:

My paintings come from the fleeting moments between night and day. Nature's light drops down while man-made city lights come up. The dance between man-made light and natural light looks as though it has been choreographed by something greater than those elements. These paintings are also about the night itself. Night hides objects, shapes morph and are lost. Lights dominate and are mostly about themselves. Lights shine onto the water making dance-like patterns. The sky, full of waning light, commands the stage while earth and everything on it are only dark scrims. It is that dance in the dark I want to share with you in my paintings.

STATEMENT:

The works submitted for this exhibition are direct responses to the 2020 Pandemic. I chose to employ Christian icons as central lynchpins for each of the pieces. I spent several months as a docent for The Samuel H. Kress Collection of Renaissance Art in Columbia, South Carolina, gleaning much about iconography. As I conducted tours, I recognized the iconic imagery full of symbols seemed to speak to audiences regardless of their religious preferences or dogma. It was that quiet sense of connection I wanted to capture in my work for this Pandemic series. My intent: engage the viewer in a reflective dialogue about the events of 2020. My process involved considering what symbols might carry strong implication but leave open notions for personal interpretation. My images are often metaphoric. Each image is a way to extend ideas, in this case, about tolerance, perseverance, knowingness, compassion, as well as confusion, disorientation, and wonder of what happened in 2020. I painted the images to appear as if they were frescoes, relics, with a historical past, taken from a sacred shrine. "Our Lady of the Pandemic" represents the pandemic in the US and what was happening globally and my own thoughts while looking in the mirror. The central figure is wearing many pieces of jewelry, some I own, some to honor individuals who are no longer with us. The jewelry symbolizes the "gems" of our lives. I was considering ideas of what is precious, what sustains us and humanity.

STATEMENT:

Much of my subject matter reflects my passion for the outdoors ranging from rural to cityscapes. I use dramatic contrast of light and dark areas using warm and cool colors. I use this style to romanticize present day places and happenings which I experience. I use texture where needed with visible brush strokes in a "controlled looseness" fashion. My compositions are often from unusual perspectives, to challenge the imagination and create new views of observation that often go unnoticed. Some paintings are deep, dark and monolithic.

STATEMENT:

Through the physical act of painting and still life genre I focus on subjects that are often overlooked to evoke a sense of interiority from their arrangement, use, & context. These set ups conjure narratives of my own personal & intimate experiences, through arrangement, choice, implied relationships, & scale. The inherent familiarity of these objects & settings invites viewers to make connections between that which is deeply personal as well as shared. An object can hold multitudes from the kitsch and ubiquitous, to the sentimental, or intimate and immemorial. My work has focused on a specific sense of proximity and physicality through composition, scale, materiality, and color. The shallow depth of my paintings provides an experience of closeness by flipping a downward view of a horizontal surface, like a table or the ground itself, up onto the vertical wall, presenting a mesh of everyday activities into a place of import for further consideration. Painting fuses and forms ideas in a physical way, through image, color, material, and history. A sense of totality is created through the painting, and one's unique experience and relationship with it. Working within the genre of still life allows me to create relationships beyond the represented images, addressing gender identity struggles between the domestic and professional, private and public. It also allows me to be in conversation with paintings and human experience across time. The every-day is a rich subject, extending beyond the access point of the familiar image, into bigger questions about our humanity and psychology, as it creates space for shared connections across differences of all kinds.

RESUME:

John Howell White has been a practicing artist for over 40 years. His work, in oil, acrylics, egg tempera, and watercolor, has generated paintings that grapple with the interplay of cognition, sensation, and affect. White has recently shown at: The Works Gallery (2019), NYC; Archer Law Gallery 35 (2019), Philadelphia, PA; Provincetown Art Association and Museum (2018), Provincetown, MA; In-Liquid (2017), Philadelphia, PA; Jefferson Hospital (2017), Philadelphia, PA; , The Cotuit Center for the Arts (2016), Cotuit, MA; and Maryland Hall (2014), Annapolis, MD. His studio is currently based in Philadelphia. White is Emeritus Professor of Art Education in the Department of Art Education at Kutztown University. He earned his M.F.A. from Pratt Institute and his Ph.D. from The Pennsylvania State University. He is the author of Experience Painting, a Davis textbook for secondary art students. In 2012 he was named the National Higher Education Art Educator of the Year and in 2009 the Pennsylvania Higher Education Art Educator of the Year. He has conducted research and published extensively about the history and philosophy of art education. He has served as Director of the Higher Education Division of the National Art Education Association and Chair of the National Art Education Association's Research Commission, the Department of Art Education, Kutztown University, and the Council for Policy Studies in Art Education.

STATEMENT:

John Howell White on balance: To successfully make or view paintings requires negotiations, during which we fall in and out of balance with our personal histories, social conventions, physical sensations, and ideals. It is our reverence in their presence that converts these objects, painting, sculptures etc., into art. Artworks are exquisite containers for falling in and out of balance. They maintain their identities without resorting to guilt or consequence.

STATEMENT:

Harold Zabady carries on the classical photorealistic theme through a contemporary vision. Vintage automotive are still protagonists of his artwork ,subjects of whom he is very fond of . About city life,he gives an active and busy vision with scenes full of life, with open shops and walking people:while first photorealistic focused mostly on architectures and objects. Zabady's work is also focused on the common everyday life and human side of America. Painting the vintage paintings is like taking a Journey to the past.It's very similar to going through a family album. Everyone has changed, styles have come and gone.Places you visited may still be there but the transformation can be remarkable."Corner Bar" and "Meeting on Sweetbrier Street" are examples of this transformation.Capturing a moment in time makes the viewer reflect on the past.

RESUME:

Like so many artists across time I feel compelled to portray aspects of the human race. I utilize old worn implements and objects as metaphoric depictions of ourselves rather than making literal portrayals of people. Some of these objects remind me of the paradoxes of our species, and some imply the valor of individuals facing lives of relentless uncertainty. Intertwined within these are personal representations of people, thoughts, and past and present experiences of my own life; often manifested as written words in non-mainstream dialects related to those experiences. Sometimes I embed Braille writing into my pieces suggesting blindness and our inability to "see" throughout our long history of repeated mistakes. My artwork provides a meditative and personal symbolic way for me to express my feelings of mystery about humankind. It allows me to acknowledge our strengths and weaknesses, ponder our contradictions, and perhaps subtly bestow upon us a small degree of nobleness.

STATEMENT:

During the pandemic my husband and I had more time to get out into nature and take the time to photograph our surroundings. Our styles are very different and we like to make our pictures and then compare them later. These are just a few samples of what I found during our walks and hikes. In Death of Winter I first noticed the branch frozen in place on the lake, but then was drawn to the shadow and the familiar shape it created. The clouds in Treetop Vortex rolled in fast and brought with it a wonderful summer thunderstorm. The colors of the light and clouds changed quickly and then positioned themselves perfectly on the tree. The lines in the Drawing of Three that are topped by one white dot reminded me of a type of Roman Numeral but with a nature theme. I am not that much a fan of winter with it's cloudy, cold days and messy slush but every once in a while winter surprises me. Walking down my street I witnessed this beautiful sky emerge while the sun shined down. I spent nearly an hour just watching how the clouds and sky changed while soaking up so warm winter sun.

He has a degree in Graphic Arts and Photography from the Rochester Institute of Technology and additional academic degrees from Indiana University (Bloomington) and Cedar Crest College. Upon completion of his master's degree and for the next 40 plus years, Richard held various management positions at a number of colleges and universities. Anticipating his retirement over 8 years ago, Richard returned to photography and has been working on his art and volunteering with arts organizations. Richard is a member of the Lehigh Valley Photography Club, and the Arts Community of Easton (PA). For several years he was a member and exhibition chair for the Hillcrest Camera Club (NJ). He is a member of the Bethlehem Fine Arts Commission and serves on the Rotunda Gallery and City Collection committees. In 2016, Richard was invited to participate in the Boz'Art en Baz'Art residency in Vichy, France. His work is now represented in the City art collection. Richard is a member of the "5 X 5" group of artists which exhibit annually in different venues and locals. The group of 5 arts represent 5 different art media (photography, painting, pastel, mosaics, and collage/assemblage). The group has shown at the 514 Gallery, the Nature Nurture Center, Baum School of Art, The Nazareth Center for the Arts, and the Kemerer Museum. Richard has been juried into the Pennsylvania State of the Arts exhibition at the State Museum in Harrisburg for three of the last five years. He was awarded first place in photography in 2016. His award-winning works have been extensively shown both regionally and locally in the Lehigh Valley and surrounding communities including the Allentown Art Museum, Reading Public Museum, Goggleworks Art Center, Hunterdon Art Museum, Gallery at St. John's, The State Theater Gallery, The Nurture Nature Center, The Sigal Museum, the Phillips Mill Gallery, the Philadelphia Sketch Club, The Pennsylvania Center for Photogra

STATEMENT:

In my photographs, the viewer first sees the realistic subject. Through further examination, the abstract elements of the image force the viewer to experience the duality of the subject matter. I attempt to use my camera to provide a view of the subject on a second aesthetic level as a realistic expression and as an abstract expression. By using both natural and enhanced use of texture and color, I want to convey a multi-layered image to the viewer. I rarely manipulate my images but I do use photographic software to edit, and in some cases, enhance the natural image. I print my images on 100% cotton smooth fine art paper. This provides an image that is slightly softer in edge which replicates the look of a fine art print/painting.

These images are from a series I began in the Spring of 2020 at the height of the Covid pandemic. Along with the recession of 2008, the slow departure of industries in the 1970's and the overall economic decay of rust belt cities , the continued decline of the economy in Erie, Pennsylvania, once a vibrant city of manufacturing and maritime industry , was accelerated by the pandemic. Streets empty of pedestrians and vehicles allowed for a photographic study of buildings and urbanscapes in the downtown and its adjacent neighborhoods. For me, these images are revealing the silence, decay and also beauty of ruins.

Mr. Conner is a graduate of Wesleyan University where he studied art and a graduate of Harvard University. As a photographer, he is self-taught and believes an artist's work should speak for itself. He is passionate about his work and has traveled and photographed worldwide. His first year, he entered four shows and won Best in Show twice, First Place and Second Place: four shows; four awards. Since then he has won over fifty awards. Four years ago his photograph was selected from over 2,000 entries from 19 countries to be in the International Compé 15 exhibition featuring 37 photographers. He also won three Photography and Abstract Art awards at the prestigious Philadelphia Sketch Club, the oldest art club in America and former home to Thomas Eakins and Andrew Wyeth. In 2017, Mr. Conner continued to be recognized by being selected for the prestigious Art of the State Exhibition in Pennsylvania. He was one of 131 artists selected from over 2,200 entries. It was the first time his work was displayed in a museum. In 2018 his work was featured at the Cerulean Gallery in Philadelphia. Then in 2019, he was one of 25 Professional Artists selected by the Main Line Art Center for an exclusive show of their work. In the same year, his photos were featured in four separate shows at the Paragon Gallery in Phoenixville, PA. In 2020 his work was shown at the DaVinci Gallery in Philadelphia and again at the Cerulean Gallery in Philadelphia. Also in 2020 his photo of a lotus flower was selected for the world renowned Philadelphia Flower Show where he won First Prize. More recently a series of his images are on permanent display at Penn Medical Center and three of his images were just selected for the Schlow Centre Exhibition in State College. Mr. Conner's photography continues to evolve to include a wide range of subjects such as abstracts and collages that reflect his creativity. Recently he installed a powerful workstation to process large format prints.

STATEMENT:

Photographic truth is very malleable, I find that both the image maker and viewer are in possession of a medium that can significantly alter the way we view the world and process the information it contains. All of this leads me to my interest in the capture of the non fiction image, distilled from visual encounters with humanity and place. The camera is my tool, selected to understand life and communicating the result to others. In my approach to work about the human condition I shy away from the aspect of photographic coverage and tend to be involved in photographic dis coverage. It seems to me the paradox of life as well in photography is to go out and seek things which you never expected. I like to think of my work as imagery that prevents truth decay and represents honest non manipulated photographs.

STATEMENT:

Edgy, moody, somber or surreal are adjectives that could describe the images by R. Andrew Hoff. As the night wears on, the glare of the lights on the midway create a stark landscape in the enveloping darkness. The few remaining people and bored carneys become props against the backdrop of shapes, shadows and patterns. To develop the body of work I visited county fairs and community festivals in four states over the course of three years. The facial expressions, postures and attitudes show the tedium of carnival life as the evening lingers on. There are multiple stories in these images left to the viewer's imagination. What are the stories they tell you?

STATEMENT:

As an artist, I make photographs that echo and extend my concerns as a writer. Several ongoing series document places and their transformation over time. In the past, I solely made black & white photographs, which were often toned and produced in a darkroom. I still make such prints.

The picture selected for the Art of the State 2021 is from a large, conceptual series in color entitled Lessons in Recursion, which I have been working on for over a decade.

Lessons in Recursion is about layering time through creating recursive progressions by a methodical process of re-photographing images of the same site that I insert back into the landscape for as many times—over months or years—as circumstances permit. At most sites, the recursive series involves photographing a blank sign that once had been a support for what was most likely a message such as “no trespassing.” With luck, I am able to appropriate the blank sign as a support for making an ongoing succession of recursive images of the sign and the surrounding scene. This process creates the layered iterations visible in this picture and others in the series. The final exhibition prints are generated from scanned color positive film frames. The site shown in the work selected for the exhibition—the fourth iteration—is on the edge of an orchard not far from my home.

STATEMENT:

I take photographs to capture a moment or a feeling, to share with others what I was seeing and experiencing when I snapped the shutter. Light is a character in my images. I watch for the play of light, shadow, and reflection and what it does to the subject I am photographing. My work is influenced by the works of other photographers and visual artists. In the case of some of the entries submitted for this exhibition, my images are influenced by the work of Andrew Wyeth. The image of the Guitar Maker was captured at the Martin Guitar Factory in Nazareth, PA, as one of the craftsmen applied pearl inlay to the instrument, an art in itself. Anyone can take a picture; my goal is to use my camera to create art that elicits thought and reflection by the audience.

RESUME:

I am a career scientist (DVM, PhD) with a lifetime interest in the arts. My interest in drawing as a child, choosing pathology as a career, and now creating visual art is to me one continuous thread. More recently I obtained an AAS degree in Fashion Marketing (2015) from Parsons School of Design (The New School). The primary objective for pursuing this degree was to spark my creativity by attending Parsons (which I could do online while still working), and I was strongly drawn to the visual art-oriented courses including fashion design (illustration), drawing, color theory, graphic design, computer assisted design (CAD), and digital layout. These courses inspired me to experiment in creating visual art for the last several years. In 2020 I took the leap and began to submit artwork to galleries with some measure of success, spurred by the pandemic and the political and cultural crises affecting communities worldwide.

STATEMENT:

I am an African American woman. Through art I explore aspects of African American cultural experience, influenced by my personal history and current and past events that have affected communities of color. I strive to provide a new voice to ancestors who too often had none; a face to those who were effectively rendered invisible by our society. 'Cadavers who were still alive' is an homage to the Black men in Macon County, Alabama (1932 - 1972) who for 40 years were unknowingly part of the 'Tuskegee Study of Untreated Syphilis in the Negro male.' I create digital photomontages by collecting and photographing primarily vintage and antique materials (dolls, puppets, African sculptures, textiles, photographs, found objects) which are then digitally manipulated into storytelling composites. I am currently working on pencil drawings to potentially incorporate into new pieces. My primary inspiration as an artist is Romare Bearden.

Represented by OSGS Gallery in West Palm Beach, FL, until the gallery's closing in 2015 Prior to moving to Pittsburgh, my art was chosen for exhibition, several times, at Art At The Airport -- West Palm Beach I also participated in several West Palm Beach exhibitions -- Continuum, The Box Gallery, Friends of Johnathan Dickinson State Park --just to name a few. I am a graduate of Stephens College - Columbia, MO. I was born and raised in Pittsburgh. Then I migrated to West Palm Beach where I spent 40-plus years being self-employed. I have recently returned to Pittsburgh (Mount Lebanon) along with my cat, Lord Marshall, and I am enjoying getting "reacquainted" with Pittsburgh.

STATEMENT:

To put it quite simply: I am a mobile photographer who possess a rabidly curious and restless mind. While I continue to shoot traditional images, my real passion is abstract photography. Since I have zero talent for painting, I take some of my images and attempt to manipulate them into the type of abstract artwork that I am passionate about: namely, minimalism geometric abstraction, and abstract expressionism. This is done by layering, blending, deconstructing, distorting -- and lots of deleting! Sometimes I combine three or more of my images into one final image. Needless to say, with all of this "combining" -- there are lots of start-overs. But, in the end, something "unique" appears -- and that is what makes me happy and keeps me challenged.

STATEMENT:

My works aim to celebrate life. I try to use my photographs as a spotlight on different cultures around the world. Photographs from this series focus on Iran and the Persian culture. As the country of Iran is in the news more and more, the outside world only sees the ugly. The beauty of the Persian culture overpowers all the negativity surrounding the name of the country. With the death toll of COVID-19 in Iran being extremely high, I wanted to shed a light on how the people of Iran are trying to hold onto normal life.

STATEMENT:

After obtaining my B.A. in studio art with a photo concentration in 2002, where my focus had been primarily shooting with large format cameras, I, without access to a darkroom or large format cameras, abandoned photography for about ten years. After graduating from the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts with my MFA where I had begun incorporating digital photography into my practice, I relocated back to my hometown. While I had been away a community darkroom had opened at an area arts center located in a revitalized 100+ year old historic pajama factory. I began volunteering there and in 2017 I took over as manager. In 2016 I purchased my first large format camera, a 4x5 Crown Graphic handheld land camera. My primary cameras at this point are a 4x5 Crown Graphic monorail view camera and a Mamiya 645 Medium Format Camera. For the past three years I have been creating a body of work exploring my experiences as a non binary / gender non-confirming person living in a rural community. By examining gender tropes through performative self portraits I am able express the diversity of my experiences and create a model for others, both within my queer community and for those for whom the lives of people like me might be foreign or only familiar to them as mediated by political talking points about bathrooms and women's sports. By placing my own body front and center I expose my own vulnerability while also taking control of how I'm seen. I find this extremely empowering and liberating.

STATEMENT:

This series of work examines what it means to be a queer Asian man living in rural America. After having lived nearly my entire life in cities, I found myself in a completely foreign American landscape amongst white faces, red barns, and camouflage when I moved to rural central Pennsylvania. Camouflage is a common and predominant motif of rural life. The camouflage I don is drag, acting as gender and cultural camouflage. But the drag camouflage I adorn in the photographs made during the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic to address the emotions and experiences arising from the increase in anti-Asian racism and a national political agenda that pointedly named the novel coronavirus as the "Chinese virus." In light of the pandemic, what was once camouflage has now become aposematism. Aposematism (ap·o·sem·a·tism | Ă Đa-pĐ-Đse-mĐ-Đti-zĐm Ă): the use of a signal and especially a visual signal of conspicuous markings or bright colors by an animal to warn predators that it is toxic or distasteful. —Merriam-Webster

STATEMENT:

As a photographer, I believe in providing a variation in subject matter which is pleasing to both the casual observer and those with a trained artistic eye. Photography is a media which reaches out to everyone of every generation. A photograph should create a feeling and elicit an emotional response from its viewer. I strive to instill this feeling by providing diversity in my images and subject matter.

When one meditates they focus on that inner voice. As an image maker, I start with that voice and slowly take in my surroundings, to find that moment, to capture with my camera. Henri Cartier- Bresson inspires much of my work in looking for the unexpected. With technology, I can expand and translate those captured moments into my final vision.

STATEMENT:

My photographs reside in the mundane, in those very average moments in any day that allow the mind to wander. It is there while thinking of him that I snap the shutter and freeze a moment, tenderly composed and partnered with text. A photographic project about two people, one here the other not. By sharing my private loss with others we find common ground. We see there exists a universal resonance to all this human grief that goes beyond the personal. It is in that space that humanity can experience both empathy and sympathy, a husband, a death and a country boy - a work in progress consisting of an artist book accompanied by a selection of image/text prints.

He was a Spotlight Award Winner in the 2019 Black and White magazine 2019 Portfolio Contest. He was also a Black and White magazine 2018 Single Image Contest winner in three categories, including People's Choice Award winner in the Digital Manipulation category. He was named a winner in two categories of Black and White magazine's 2017 Single Issue Competition and was "spotlighted" in the October 2017 issue. In 2015, he was named by BW Gallerist as one of the top ten "Best of the Best" Emerging Fine Art Photographers and was a top ten finisher in "The Photo Review" 2015 international contest. He has received numerous awards and prizes in local and international competitions, including The Photo Review International Photography Competition; Black & White magazine; Photographer's Forum magazine; the Suzanne H. Arnold Art Gallery, Lebanon Valley College; the Art Association of Harrisburg; The Susquehanna Art Museum; the Milton S. Hershey Museum and Gallery; Plein Air Camp Hill; and Photoworkshop.com. His photos have been published in Black & White, Street Photography Magazine (May 2021 feature of "Atlantic City series"), SHOTS, COLOR, Photographer's Forum, and AfterCapture magazines, "The Washington Post", and Your Daily Photo"

STATEMENT:

A good image, be it a single shot or composite, implies a story, but doesn't announce the way you should feel about it. These are the in-between, vaguely uncomfortable images that beg questions in the viewer's mind and invite open interpretation. The common denominator is that the image elicits emotion. I believe my submissions accomplishes this, though they are representative of several genres (documentary, composite, and "street"). I'm certainly not a purist when it comes to the appearance of the finished image. As a photographer and imagemaker, I'm interested in making pictures that "speak," through the post-processing options available. Enjoy the conversation.

STATEMENT:

It took a village to raise me. To honor and pay respect to my village, I strive for that message to be reflected in my work. You'll notice a common theme of community and gratitude throughout my images. I aim for people to see the common intersections of our humanity no matter what community they may come from by doing my best to capture the emotion and reality of the moment. This helps create empathy and synergy. To do that I like to get close to my subjects so the viewer feels like they can step into the moment with me. We all want to be seen. We all want to feel like we matter and we all want to be remembered. These are the moments I deemed worth remembering. Who is Shelby?

Through my personal photography I set out to capture moments in time that cannot ordinarily be seen, allowing you to view the world with a fresh set of eyes, and make you question what you are seeing. With the use of long exposures I am able to create images that otherwise would be impossible to see with a traditional exposure. The extension of time in the frame provides the viewer an opportunity to see the world in a completely new way. In my aerial photography I attempt to present familiar locations from a perspective never experienced by the audience. My hope is that the ordinary becomes the extraordinary as the viewer takes a moment to stop and think about the subject matter before them. This allows the audience to experience a photograph in a new and exciting way. All photos presented for this exhibit were taken directly around and above the Pennsylvania State Museum in Harrisburg Pennsylvania, proving that a unique series of images can be taken anywhere.

STATEMENT:

After years of fermentation, three once separate parts of my life, macro-photography, quilting, and botany; now come together in my fiber art. Once a traditional flat quilter my work now rises from the surface to taunt the viewer to reach out and touch. I show aspects of the natural world few stop to see, with intense dives into nature from a bee's eye view or with a more botanical perspective. Most of my quilts start with a flower or weed in my garden, I have probably taken a hundred pictures of it in various light and throughout its life, from bud to seed head. Standing in front of my wall of collected fabric, pieces will catch my eye and bring color, texture, or pattern to the quilt. As the series have progressed they have become more abstract and looser. Finding bits of the structure of the plants to explore. In using all materials; recycled designer samples, wire, glass, canvas, traditional quilting fabrics, and liberal use of thread I bring texture to my work. The wall pieces are stretched on canvas to stabilize the weight of the sculptural elements. I have to take into account gravity. Some of the work has escaped the wall to become sculptures completing the three-dimensional path I'm on.

STATEMENT:

I am driven by my relentless urge to describe feelings through materiality. Conceptually, my work is based on the tension or the stagnation that is generated through managing emotional balance. The journey is never smooth; therefore, I aim to capture the varying stages that emerge. As a sculptural fiber and materials artist, I am drawn to the manipulation of flexible materials. My work tends to be varied in appearance but it thematically focuses on the clashing of soft and hard; the transformation of plain or seemingly ugly materials to reveal their beautiful and delicate qualities; and the act of piecing and binding. Tension is created by stitching, pulling, and layering of the bodily-like materials. These elements come together to form the physical embodiment of maintaining emotional balance. Ultimately, I hope to evoke an alluring outcome from the struggle.

STATEMENT:

Maker is a term I decided to use to describe my being—artist, designer and craftsperson—all part of the same landscape, but maker has a broader stroke. It has more to do with creating in new frontiers as opposed to renovating an existing reality. For more than 40 years, I have reached, played, transformed and transferred my sense of what is real, what is now and what is why. I have made objets d'art for the body, the home—as heart and soul. Decorating the soul is a new frontier, it is a space where everything is real, everything is alive and perspective doesn't exist—it just is. Having received recognition in the mainstream press has fueled my courage to explore different ways to make waves and try to ride them. All in all, making what I see and seeing what I make is a priceless experience...the struggle has its rewards. The past, present and future is a goal I hope to express in my work—to strive for a timeless quality exhibited by ancient objects made for ceremonial purposes. The ceremony is Life and is to be celebrated. Enjoy!

STATEMENT:

I am inspired by the American Sublime as it relates to western expansion and Manifest Destiny, and depictions of the landscape as seen in movements such as the Hudson Valley painters. These visions of locational identity create a sense of ownership over what we feel is ours to protect, yet our culture moves at an exhausting pace and it is difficult to control flux. I create objects and images that ask the audience to remain still while feeling that culture constantly threatens to pass them by. My current work uses images of nature combined with constructed objects to examine our efforts to control our environment, both natural and man-made. With imagery of places we want to be, and places we try to forget, my work is a collection of mementos of our traditions of ill-won and futile struggles.

STATEMENT:

Since I can remember I have always been drawn to the natural world, either through time spent camping and hiking or days spent exploring the local junkyards and scrap piles. I joke that as a child I was the one watching Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom instead of the local baseball game. At the same time, art; and the creation of it, was also a constant in my life preferring mediums which gravitated to 3-dimensional work. Today, inspiration comes from looking at the correlation between the "tools" and objects that have been created for human intention and how these items can relate to organic shapes found in the natural world. I look for these shapes buried within objects. I then utilize these shapes and reinterpret them into the anatomical structures that make up the organic sculptures I create. Honoring the past histories and owners of the materials I use is also a major inspiration driving the creation of my sculptures. Who worked with a pruning saw to an extent that leaves it with a paint rubbed patina that can never be replicated? Or the child who enjoyed a toy car such that the wheels were literally worn away? However, it still exists, I can honestly say that not many of mine do from my own childhood. So, honoring these cherished items gives them new life through re-interpretation in my sculptures. In the end creating beauty from many common and in some cases mundane everyday objects. Many times sculptures are born from the inspiration of a single item. This launches a process in which additional materials are then gathered and the sculpture grows from there in depiction of the original vision. I have been producing sculptures professionally for around 10 years now. However, as with any medium or vocation, one must always be learning. I believe with art, the artist is always evolving. It is human nature to to expand one's consciousness and introduce themselves to new experiences.

STATEMENT:

I create sculptures utilizing neon and argon lighting, metal, acrylic and glass. My work is inspired by the flow and opposition of energy in our environment. My sculptures are abstract in design, with metal as a frame work for the colored luminous tubing which reflects off the glass and acrylic. The sculptures without neon, depict energy flow with the interactions of colors in the art glass and acrylic shapes. "Yellow Aqueous Flow" suggest energy flow in water depicted by the wavy, yellow argon tubing mounted within the blue anodized aluminum frame work. The sculpture alludes to the ebb and flow of tides in major rivers like the Delaware and Susquehanna which provide valuable drinking water for eastern Pennsylvania.

STATEMENT:

Over the past thirty five years I have developed an increasingly spare vocabulary of forms. At one time more organic, my pieces have gradually become more geometric through the influence of both process and choice of material. My earliest works were designed as clay models and then scaled up into laminated hardwood, kiln dried boards glued together to create a stable mass. Wood was initially a choice of convenience, a permanent material, readily available and easily worked with common tools. As I moved towards more regular solids I eliminated the clay models and began to design pieces on a graph pad. This process of working with a grid has influenced the shapes, as has the continued use of dimensional hardwood lumber. Although I have never considered myself a "woodworker", I now rarely think in terms of another material. My work has always been about simple, subtle curves, shifting planes and how light reveals them. Free standing pieces are most often about transitions from one shape to another. The use of a contrasting material, most often silver leaf or paint, not only plays off the sensuous quality of the wood and adds a secondary design element but also emphasizes the play of light across the surface. While not strictly serial, my pieces tend to evolve one out of the other. One piece will often generate ideas for other variations. Ultimately, the decision of which pieces work aesthetically and which do not is intuitive. Scale and proportion are both very important. Although formal and abstract in design, my pieces are intended to be appreciated on a more intimate level as objects we encounter on a very human scale.

STATEMENT:

My work focuses on the female figure and how we choose to allow ourselves to be judged by external standards of body and appearance. These standards are self-imposed in response to societal expectations and our own innate need to conform. We are not the only ones policing our conformity we are judged by others, as well. Not just the people we see in passing, but our mothers, sisters, and friends. When we let these external pressures push us out of true we are shifted off our personal foundations. Our true form may or may not be consistent with the contemporary idealized image of a beautiful, successful woman. Clothing such as high heels and corsets reform the body into an unnatural shape, which may paradoxically be considered the ideal. While continuously exploring the human figure I have found that the evolution of my artistic concept is parallel to gender stresses and insecurities and are juxtaposed with issues surrounding female politics. I create art that navigates and addresses long standing gender constraints and perception. These stereotypes halt us from the past and are usually unspoken. My work creates a forum for this conversation and helps us see if not feel how that transition continues to affect us in the here and now. I have experimented with a myriad of materials in an attempt to bring forth these notions in my art. The recurring theme of transparent materials, in contrast to opaque, is indicative of the ephemeral quality of the human body. This is evident in my current work representing the dichotomy between the delicate yet powerful self, and the evolving roles women play set forth by societal structure. Scale and proportion are both very important. Although formal and abstract in design, my pieces are intended to be appreciated on a more intimate level as objects we encounter on a very human scale.

STATEMENT:

My art represents a personal journey of years of research and development using fibers as a sculptural medium. Reconfiguring assumptions, I use fiber as a primary medium. Rather than using paper or felt on which to apply my work, I manipulate and transform the pulp, wool and/or plant fibers into sculptural forms. I have adapted age-old techniques and traditional materials to make contemporary works of art. I create staged environments defined by human presence. I sculpt fibers to extremes with textures, scale and forced perspective I challenge the audience enter my world of illusions. I entertain contemporary issues and call for consciousness. I studied art at Montclair University where I received a Bachelor of Arts in art education. After a teaching stint, I returned for advance studies at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. My works have been widely exhibited in galleries and represented in many public and private collections. Recognition at the local and national level include the Pennsylvania Governor's award and publication in the Fiber Arts Design Book 7, Best of American Sculpture Artist, Vol II 2010. Scale and proportion are both very important. Although formal and abstract in design, my pieces are intended to be appreciated on a more intimate level as objects we encounter on a very human scale.

STATEMENT:

The imagery within my drawings and prints focuses on abstractions, idealizations, and transitions of the built environment, habitation, and the natural world. In my work, I consider the restructuring of supportive and opposing forces. I use my everyday life as a source for gathering imagery, pattern, texture, and form. From my process, I am left with collected fragments, complex and layered drawings, objects, and prints developed by layering, inventing, repurposing and duplicating imagery to create forms that consider a structural, emotional, or conceptual relevance. These forms explore shifting natural systems, moments of habitation, and fluctuating stability.

STATEMENT:

As an artist, I enjoy exploring all types of mediums, charcoal, sculpture, paint, and so much more. Through my work, there are multiple themes I explore but there is one underlying theme that ties them all together no matter the gap and that is contrast. Whether it be the literal concept of contrast in colors or the theoretical contrast between subject matter. Some examples of this include light and dark, triangles and circles, and life and death. One of my biggest inspirations I pull from in the steampunk culture. The idea of the old becoming new again is beautiful to me. Steampunk culture is all about the creatives, inventors, and artists being able to take objects that no longer have life and revitalize their parts into a brand new one-of-a-kind gadget or contraption is awe-inspiring.

I am a graduate of McDaniel College in Westminster Maryland with a BA in Studio Art. I have continued to take art classes throughout my life and I have been a member of several local arts organizations. I started actively showing my art in 2012 and my drawings have been accepted in gallery shows and have won awards in many states in the US.

STATEMENT:

My primary art form is graphite drawing. I am have a Bachelor's Degree in Studio Art but I consider my drawing technique to be self taught since my teachers wisely let me work in my own style in drawing classes. I prefer realism and while my art is illustrative of my world I don't consider my finished pieces to be illustration, for me sharing my view of a subject is a communication and a finished art piece. I work from life or my own photographs. I like subjects with strong contrasts and creative lighting and I like to challenge my art technique by choosing a variety of different subjects.

After marrying fellow artist Jim and producing two arty children, I became the original cover illustrator for the Montgomery County Town and Country Living Magazine and co-founded the Montgomery County Guild of Professional Artists. My work is featured in gallery and museum shows and numerous private collections. I have been commissioned for many portraits and have won numerous awards in regional, national and international shows including Phillips Mill, Philadelphia Water Color Society, Philadelphia Sketch Club, and the Gold and Silver Medals at Audubon Artists Inc., at the Salmagundi Club in NYC. Over the last few years I am enjoying instructing adult fine art classes. I reside just outside Philadelphia with Jim, a few chickens and too many gardens.

STATEMENT:

These pieces are from my latest portfolio entitled "Silverpoint and the Subtle Beauty of Decay". This body of work combines my love of nature and life-long habit of collecting found objects with an enduring interest in mixed media. I attempt to give the relics a second purpose by animating them and creating quirky portraits with narratives, while still remaining true to their intriguing properties of decay. Since most objects are altered by exposure to the elements, the tarnishing silver helps to contribute to this illusion. By collaging splattered, stamped and torn papers into the composition I attempt to further convey this feeling of evolving.

STATEMENT:

My work is largely concerned with the role of architecture in society as a symbol of cultural values and history. Architecture represents a significant investment of time, resources, and design knowledge, and while we celebrate this fact in the achievements of our celebrity architects, we are less apt to acknowledge the achievement inherent in our more utilitarian structures. The American landscape, in fact, is full of contemporary ruins of factories, hotels, schools, and other architecture that has fallen by the wayside in an aggressively consumerist society. Each of these abandoned structures forms the nucleus of a small narrative, often one of lost livelihoods, budgetary cuts, and dying industries. I choose to decontextualize the subject of each drawing, removing the structure from its surroundings and isolating it on a white ground. This aesthetic decision is intended to echo the fragmentary picture of history that we are presented with in a museum, where isolated artifacts are meant to tell us the story of an unfamiliar culture. I use mechanical perspective as a means of meditating on the design process that went into the commonplace structures that I depict. Perspective is not only a visualization tool employed by architects, but it is also a process that helps me to fundamentally understand the space that I am depicting. It is my hope that through these drawings viewers will reconsider the deeper cultural significance of these structures and the ramifications of the intensive capitalism that shapes contemporary American life.

RESUME:

A graduate of the Maryland Institute College of Art, Richard Chandler Hoff is a nationally recognized artist working exclusively in graphite pencil on paper. Hoff illustrates life in America during the 1940s relying on extensive research to accurately depict that decade. At the age of twenty-eight Hoff's work was reviewed in the French arts magazine La Revue Moderne. In 1987 Richard was awarded Second Place in the American Artist Magazine Golden Anniversary Traveling Exhibition. Only 68 artists were chosen from 13,000 entries. Hoff's work has been included in the prestigious Pennsylvania Art of the State competition for eight years and he is represented in public, corporate and private collections including the Butler Institute of American Art and MBNA Bank (now Bank of America). In 2015 he was awarded Master Pencil Artist (signature) Status by the Pencil Arts Society of Canada. He is a winner of the Williams Prize in Drawing (Juror's Choice Award) for 2016. Hoff's drawings have been featured in American Artist Magazine and the premier issue of Drawing Magazine.

STATEMENT:

My work is largely concerned with the role of architecture in society as a symbol of cultural values and My drawings provide a pictorial narrative of life in America during the 1930s and '40s. Architecture and light play key roles in my work and I have been greatly influenced by the work of Edward Hopper. Hopper used buildings as well as light to distill the essence of what is American and the success of his work has shown me the legitimacy of depicting the urban landscape. Born too late to have truly experienced the 1940s, I instead rely on written and verbal stories and imagery gathered from extensive photo files. I then create visual folktales to illustrate the style and romance which withstood the brutality of a world war to influence us even today in music, literature, fashion and the theatre. I prefer to work in graphite because I realize how appropriate it is for illustrating an era whose photographic and cinematic imagery were predominantly in black and white. Also, the wonderful tactile relationship between pencil and paper enables me to intimately connect with the creative process.

STATEMENT:

I create pictures that help me explore the idea of escape, ideas of mortality and passage after life, and about how to deal with trauma and healing from that trauma. My use of the figure explores my identity as a queer man that is still expected to justify my experiences and basic human identity. I use nautical imagery, water and the human figure in order to communicate essential ideas of how we relate to each other, how we affect each other, and how to move to space that is empowering and encouraging. I often depict the figure (or figurative elements or components) in situations or stances that allude to ideas of fighting back, play and wonderment, as well as stoicism and quiet resolve. I also work with the idea of "passage" and "journey" not only to communicate ideas of healing and working through trauma, but also to communicate the idea of growing beyond limitations and definitions of being.

STATEMENT:

My art is rooted in the natural world and landscapes of Pennsylvania. The effects of the localized scenery, the remnants of past industry, and the plants and animals that inhabit the region have provided inspiration throughout my career. I strive to reveal the inherent beauty of overlooked and forgotten places, especially scenes reclaimed by nature. Over the past several years, my process has evolved from traditional painting and drawing to working in collaged paper. This medium provides an engaging set of challenges in terms of color, composition, and representation, all beginning with a contour line drawing. More recently, plein air sketches and watercolor studies have become the starting point for my cut paper collages.

RESUME:

I am a career scientist (DVM, PhD) with a lifetime interest in the arts. My interest in drawing as a child, choosing pathology as a career, and now creating visual art is to me one continuous thread. More recently I obtained an AAS degree in Fashion Marketing (2015) from Parsons School of Design (The New School). The primary objective for pursuing this degree was to spark my creativity by attending Parsons (which I could do online while still working), and I was strongly drawn to the visual art-oriented courses including fashion design (illustration), drawing, color theory, graphic design, computer assisted design (CAD), and digital layout. These courses inspired me to experiment in creating visual art for the last several years. In 2020 I took the leap and began to submit artwork to galleries with some measure of success, spurred by the pandemic and the political and cultural crises affecting communities worldwide.

STATEMENT:

I am an African American woman. Through art I explore aspects of African American cultural experience, influenced by my personal history and current and past events that have affected communities of color. I strive to provide a new voice to ancestors who too often had none; a face to those who were effectively rendered invisible by our society. 'Cadavers who were still alive' is an homage to the Black men in Macon County, Alabama (1932 - 1972) who for 40 years were unknowingly part of the 'Tuskegee Study of Untreated Syphilis in the Negro male.' I create digital photomontages by collecting and photographing primarily vintage and antique materials (dolls, puppets, African sculptures, textiles, photographs, found objects) which are then digitally manipulated into storytelling composites. I am currently working on pencil drawings to potentially incorporate into new pieces. My primary inspiration as an artist is Romare Bearden.

His work has graced book jackets, record covers, and editorial stories for Dell Books, Avon Books, RCA Records, Psychology Today, The New York Times, and many others. He has also been on the faculty of the Dance Department of New York University's Tisch School of the Arts, and a performer with The Paul Taylor Dance Company. His artwork has appeared in gallery shows around America including "The Northeastern Biennial", "Art of the State" at the State Museum of PA; The Lodge at Woodloch, Hawley, PA; Ceres Gallery, Chelsea, NYC; and solo shows at AFA Gallery, Scranton, PA. and The Delaware Valley Arts Alliance in Narrowsburg, NY. Paul is the author/illustrator of several books and a curator of "The Great Wall of Honesdale," a public art project of epic proportions.

STATEMENT:

I focus on uniting diverse visual elements to create unexpected graphic images. Utilizing primarily 19th C ephemera, my work is all hand cut with surgeon's scalpels and assembled with acid-free glues. Nothing is computer generated. My early background in the theater - from amateur tap dancer to professional modern dancer with The Paul Taylor Dance Company - provided a wide range of experience in the theatrics of heightened states of being. In this sense, I approach each assemblage as a choreographic moment in time, a theatrical event occurring at the point where worlds collide. All of my works are displayed in restored antique frames.

RESUME:

Catherine Prescott's work consists primarily of portraits. She has twice exhibited in the Outwin Boochever Portrait Competition at the National Portrait Gallery, Smithsonian Museum. In 2018 she was commissioned to paint Governor Tom Corbett's official portrait. She exhibited with Women Painting Women in their inaugural show at Robert Lange in 2010 and has since exhibited in numerous galleries with WPW. Other 2017 shows include "Sight Unseen," at Abend Gallery, Denver, "Honoring the Legacy of David Park," at Santa Clara University. In 2016, she was one of nine painters invited by Principle Gallery, Charleston, to exhibit portraits of the Charleston Nine. Catherine has received awards at The Representational Art Conference in 2019, Best in Show, three First prizes, and a Purchase prize at the State Museum of Pennsylvania. She was honored with a special section of her works in an exhibition of historic 20th C. portraits at the Susquehanna Museum of Art. She won prizes at The Salmagundi Club and ten first prizes in juried exhibits. She was a finalist in the 14th ARC International Salon. She was invited to participate in "Inspiring Figures," at the Butler Institute of American Art. Museum shows include the Brauer Museum of Art, the Susquehanna Museum of Art, and the Phillips Museum of Art. Her most recent one-person shows were at North Park University and Long Island Academy of Fine art. Her work has been featured in The Huffington Post, Image Journal, CIVA Seen, American Arts Quarterly, The Art of The Portrait, and American Art Collector. Prescott taught painting and drawing at Messiah College for 20 years, and has continued to teach intermittently in Gordon College's Orvieto, Italy, program since 1998. She taught portrait workshops at Andreeva Portrait Academy and Image Summer Institute. Public collections include the Governor's Offices of the Pennsylvania State Capitol, The State Museum of Pennsylvania, Messiah College, and the Fulton Bank in Lancaster, PA.

STATEMENT:

As a portrait painter, I normally photograph my subjects in strong natural light, and I have never worked from iphone snapshots. When Covid restrictions hit, I was unable to photograph people with my regular camera in the controlled light of my studio, so I searched my library for casual pictures of friends. The result is a series of "Covid Drawings." Their cities are named to emphasize the nature of a pandemic. Each of the photographs I worked from met my criteria for the emotional content of life in isolation, which included an image of the subject in a pensive moment. I am always looking for clues to interiority in a face. The unruly medium of vine charcoal helped me focus on the larger clues because detailed photographic information was hard to copy. As always, I found my way to a connection between the exterior and the interior that I know is there. I've always been very influenced by 19th and early 20th Century photographs. Working on these drawings further motivated me to study work by Cameron, Nadar, Eakins, Degas, Gauguin, and the studio portraits of Frederick Douglass.

STATEMENT:

My paintings are about solitude, space, shadows and the moments between actions. I paint people waiting, gazing, pausing or moving from one place to another. The surface of my paintings are as important to me as the image itself. I am always experimenting with color relationships and textures. I enjoy pulling colors up, pushing them against each other and looking for places where the colors will appear most luminous. Frequently, I am compelled to look back on various experiences in my life - a moment lost, a season or an hour glimpsed or the after image of a brief encounter. Most, if not all, of my paintings can be viewed as reflections on those experiences, but the reflections are not always immediate. They come while I am developing the work and making strategic decisions on such matters as color, rhythm, variety, contrast and unity. This is where my true journey begins. I love the intuitive and improvisational aspects of abstraction. Most of my non-figurative (or non-objective) abstract paintings are nostalgia-based meaning that they are derived from personal sensory memories. My hope is that people who see my work will be moved to bring their own history to the painting. Some of my non-objective abstractions stem from blind intuitive drawings executed as reactions to auditory stimuli. In some of my paintings, I like to explore the use of oil and cold wax mixtures - a technique similar to traditional encaustic painting.

STATEMENT:

People, people, people. That's what I draw, that's what I paint, that's what I love seeing when going to museums and galleries. I am drawn to explorations of how to represent the human figure. My figures are recognizable, but described in patterns and vibrant colors. Inspiration comes from anywhere, everywhere: old photos, advertising, pornography. Currently I am working to push my own boundaries of what figures or portraits should look like: more patterning almost to the point of abstraction, while preserving the human spirit.

STATEMENT:

My recent work addresses still life objects void of an environmental context. I approach each drawing as a formal investigation of technique and representation. I use chiaroscuro technique to achieve dramatic lights and shadows. I am most interested in amplifying the intensity of the dense, black backgrounds against the more delicate tones within the drawing. My work also has a strong graphic sensibility which is referential to my background in printmaking, most notably silk-screen printing.
